
MOTHER TONGUE ACTING WORKSHOP - Liminal Theatre

Acting in your preferred language

Draf and Mary Sitarenos have a long history of working with actors from many backgrounds and cultures and working with actors where English is not their first language.

They have created an approach to acting and theatre making, which is the basis of the practice of Liminal Theatre and Performance.

This work has been employed in Asia (Singapore, Taiwan, Hong Kong China) and Senegal (Africa). Liminal Theatre is investigating a multi-lingual theatre program.

The workshop will unfold the core practices of Liminal Theatre while working with the actors in their preferred language. The work involves exploring the dimensions of time, space and text kinesthetically, with an emphasis on rhythmical, spatial and physical awareness. The work engages the body and voice in a moment-to-moment experience, creating an encounter between the imagination and the spoken text.

This workshop will focus on monologues and dialogues from a Greek Play translated into actors preferred language.
